

Drawn: A Hammer Novel (Hammer Club Book 2)

Giles is an artist, a man who is intense and totally focused on his art. In fact, a lot of people including some of his own family, think hes a little bit crazy. Harrison meets the artist as Giles is running away from setting up a showing at a gallery, totally freaked out. Harrison is immediately intrigued. He doesnt think Giles is crazy, but he does believe that Giles needs someone like him, or more accurately, him, to help Giles focus on more than just his art. Giles isnt exactly easy to convince that Harrison is the man to do the job, though. He likes Harrison well enough and the sex is wonderful, but this BDSM stuff Harrison talks about is just a game, right? And Giles is worried that all the time hes spending focused on Harrison is damaging his art. After all, you have to suffer for your art, right? Can Harrison convince him that Giles can have love, happiness and Harrison in his life as well as be a great artist or will Giles worries about his artwork drive them apart for good? Previously published by Torquere Press.
