

The Emergency Medical Services Vol II

This volume covers the establishment of EMS outside of England. It discusses the siege of Malta, the battle for Hong Kong, the occupation in Malaya and SE Asia, and gives a clear picture of the state of health care in Scotland and Ireland during the war. Some fascinating insights - particularly that it is to the war to establish the Air Ambulance Service to medically connect the Western Isles of Scotland with modern medicine. The story of the Port Medical Officer who quarantined a ship with 3,000 people (correctly) - against government instructions - also makes for interesting reading.
